Legal Updates since the Title IX regulations Took Effect on August 14, 2020	35

Title IX prohibits discrimination based on sex by entities that receive federal funding. Under the regulations to Title IX that took effect August 14, 2020, a school or school district's Title IX Coordinator(s), investigator(s), decision-maker(s), and informal resolution process facilitator(s) must all be trained on the following topics: the definition of sexual harassment, the scope of a school's education program or activity, the new regulatory requirements of the Title IX investigation and grievance process, and how to avoid conflicts of interest and bias. Investigators and decision-makers must also be trained on how to recognize relevant evidence and questioning. The purpose of this training is to cover those topics, to explain the new regulations, and to offer practical advice on how to conduct and resolve a Title IX investigation under the new grievance procedure.

I. DEFINITIONS

A. Sexual Harassment. Sexual harassment is now defined, by regulation, as conduct on the basis of sex that also satisfies one or more of the following conditions:

1. A school employee conditioning the provision of an aid, benefit, or service of school on an individual's participation in unwelcome sexual conduct;

Unwelcome conduct determined by a reasonable person to be so severe, pervasive, and objectively offensive that it effectively denies a person equal access to the school's education program or activity; or a. "Sexual Assault" means any sexual act directed against another person, without the consent of the victim, including instances where the victim is incapable of giving consent. See 20 U.S.C. 1092(f)(6)(A)(v). Sexual acts range from groping and fondling to forcible penetration.

Sexual assault dating violence, domestic violence, or stalking, as those terms are defined by federal law.

b. "Dating Violence" means violence committed by a person who is or has been in a social relationship of a romantic or intimate nature with the victim. Whether such a relationship exists depends on the length of the relationship, the type of relationship, and the frequency of interaction between the persons involved in the relationship. See 34 U.S.C. § 12291(a)(10).

c. "Domestic Violence" means felony or misdemeanor crimes of violence committed by a current or former spouse or intimate

MUST meet all 3 criteria
(A single act can meet all 3)

partner of the victim, by a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, by a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse or intimate partner, by a person similarly situated to a spouse of the victim under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies, or by any other person against an adult or youth victim who is protected from that person's acts under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction. See 34 U.S.C. § 12291(a)(8).

- d. "Stalking" means engaging in a course of conduct directed at a specific person that would cause a reasonable person to fear for his or her safety or the safety of others; or suffer substantial emotional distress. See 34 U.S.C. § 12291(a)(30).

34 C.F.R. § 106.30(a). In June 2021, the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights issued a Notice of Interpretation clarifying that it currently interprets "conduct on the basis of sex" to include conduct on the basis of sexual orientation or gender identity.

- B. Actual Knowledge. Actual knowledge, which triggers a school or district's duty to respond in a manner that is not deliberately indifferent, means, in relevant part, "notice of sexual harassment or allegations of sexual harassment to a recipient's Title IX Coordinator or any official of the recipient who has authority to institute corrective measures on behalf of the recipient, or to any employee of an elementary and secondary school." 34 C.F.R. § 106.30(a) (emphasis added). "This standard is not met when the only official of the recipient with actual knowledge is the Respondent." Id.
- C. Complainant. "Complainant means an individual who is alleged to be the victim of conduct that could constitute sexual harassment." 34 C.F.R. § 106.30(a).
- D. Respondent. "Respondent means an individual who has been reported to be the perpetrator of conduct that could constitute sexual harassment." 34 C.F.R. § 106.30(a).
- E. Party. The term "party" refers to a Complainant or a Respondent. The term "parties" refers to both. Some reports of sexual harassment may involve multiple Complainants or multiple Respondents, or both. For purposes of clarity, these materials use the singular form. However, these regulations apply equally to both single- and multi-Complainant or Respondent complaints.

- F. Supportive Measures. The terms “supportive measures” or “interim supportive measures” mean “non-disciplinary, non-punitive individualized services offered as appropriate, as reasonably available, and without fee or charge to the Complainant or the Respondent before or after the filing of a formal complaint or where no formal complaint has been filed.” 34 C.F.R. § 106.30(a). Supportive measures “are designed to restore or preserve equal access to the recipient’s education program or activity without unreasonably burdening the other party, including measures designed to protect the safety of all parties or the recipient’s educational environment, or deter sexual harassment.” Id. Examples include “counseling, extensions of deadlines or other course-related adjustments, modifications of work or class schedules, campus escort services, mutual restrictions on contact between the parties, changes in work or housing locations, leaves of absence, increased security and monitoring of certain areas of the campus, and other similar measures.” Id.

Supportive measures are coordinated by the Title IX Coordinator, and should be kept confidential, to the extent that maintaining confidentiality does not otherwise interfere with the provision of supportive measures.

- G. Education Program or Activity. “Education program or activity” includes locations, events, or circumstances over which the school or district exercised substantial control over both the Respondent and the context in which the sexual harassment occurs. 34 C.F.R. § 106.44(a).

II. GENERAL RESPONSIBILITIES

- A. Designation of Title IX Coordinator. Every school or school district must designate at least one Title IX Coordinator. 34 C.F.R. § 106.8(a). The Title IX Coordinator receives complaints of sexual harassment and sex discrimination, either by telephone, e-mail, mail to their office, or in person. Id. Accordingly, the identity of the Title IX Coordinator and that person’s contact information must be provided to (1) applicants for admission and employment, (2) students, (3) parents or legal guardians, (4) employees, and (5) all unions and professional organizations that have collective bargaining or professional agreements with the school or district. Id.

Key Point: The Title IX Coordinator must be a school employee, per the regulations. All other roles can be contracted out.

- B. Dissemination of Policy. Schools and school districts must provide notice to the persons listed in Paragraph A above that the school or district does not discriminate on the basis of sex in its education program or activities, including in employment, that it is required by Title IX not to discriminate in such a manner, and that questions regarding Title IX may be referred to the Title IX Coordinator. 34 C.F.R. § 106.8(b)(1).

This notice must be listed on the school or school district's website, and in each handbook or catalog that it makes available to students, parents, employees, applicants for employment or admission, and unions. 34 C.F.R. § 106.8(b)(2).

- C. Grievance Procedure. The new regulations establish the guidelines for a grievance procedure. See 34 C.F.R. § 106.45. All schools and/or school districts who receive federal funding are required to adopt a grievance procedure that complies with the regulations. 34 C.F.R. § 106.8(c).

III. General Rules for Responding to a Report of Sexual Harassment

- A. Respond in a Manner that is Not Deliberately Indifferent. When a school or district has actual knowledge of an allegation of sexual harassment, it has a duty to respond to that complaint in a manner that is not deliberately indifferent. 34 C.F.R. § 106.44(a). "Deliberate indifference" means a response that is "clearly unreasonable in light of the known circumstances." Id.

It is the responsibility of the Title IX Coordinator to contact the Complainant promptly, discuss supportive measures that are available with or without the filing of a formal complaint, consider the Complainant's wishes with respect to supportive measures, and explain the process for filing a formal complaint to the Complainant. Id.

The response must treat the Complainant and Respondent equitably, by offering supportive measures to the Complainant, and by following the grievance process if a formal complaint is filed. Id.

A formal complaint must be in writing
- cannot be a third party

STEP ONE – ROLE OF THE TITLE IX COORDINATOR

I. RECEIPT OF A COMPLAINT

A. Verify Document Meets the Standard of a Formal Complaint

1. Report is a physical document (not an oral report), filed either in person, electronically or by mail.
2. The report is filed by a Complainant (or Complainant's parent) or signed by the Title IX Coordinator.
3. The report alleges sexual harassment against a Respondent and requests that the school or school district investigate the allegation of sexual harassment.

B. Responding to a "Report" or "Actual Knowledge" of Sexual Harassment

1. Information is conveyed about conduct that could constitute "sexual harassment."
2. The information or report was received by the:
 - a. Title IX Coordinator;
 - b. any school or school district employee who has authority to institute corrective measures on behalf of the school or school district; or
 - c. any employee of an elementary or secondary school.
3. Respond in a manner that is not deliberately indifferent when they have knowledge of a complaint, regardless of whether or not the complaint is a formal complaint.
4. If the Title IX Coordinator obtains actual knowledge of sexual harassment based on observations or an oral complaint, the complaint should be reduced to writing and signed by either the Complainant or the Title IX Coordinator in order to create a "formal complaint."

II. INITIAL EVALUATION OF THE COMPLAINT

A. Immediate Dismissal of Complaint

Report = Actual Knowledge Complaint - Triggers investigation

Must offer supportive measure

1. Standard for Mandatory Dismissal of a Complaint

A formal complaint must be dismissed if:

- a. The conduct alleged in the formal complaint, even if proven, does not meet the definition of sexual harassment set by the regulations and school policy;
- b. The conduct alleged in the formal complaint did not occur in the school or school district's education program or activity; or
- c. The conduct alleged did not occur against a person in the United States.

2. Standard for Permissive Dismissal

A formal complaint may be dismissed if:

- a. The Complainant notifies the Title IX Coordinator, in writing, that he or she would like to withdraw the complaint;
- b. The Respondent is no longer enrolled at or employed by the school; or
- c. Specific circumstances prevent the school or school district from gathering evidence sufficient to reach a determination as to the complaint.

3. Responsibilities When Dismissing a Complaint

- a. The parties shall be notified, in writing, if a formal complaint is dismissed and the reason(s) for the dismissal.
- b. Dismissal of a formal complaint does not preclude the imposition of discipline arising out of the same conduct for any other violations of the student code of conduct or the school's or school district's policies.

B. Referral of Complaint to Other Staff or Entities

1. Referral or Coordination of Allegations of Harassment Based on Protected Class

2. Referral or Coordination of Allegations of Bullying
3. Referral or Coordination of Allegations of Code of Conduct Violation
4. Referral or Coordination with Law Enforcement
5. Maltreatment of Minors Reporting

III. NOTICE OF ALLEGATION

A. Individuals Who Must Receive Notice of the Complaint

Upon receipt of a formal complaint, the Title IX Coordinator must provide all known parties with a written notice.

B. Contents of Notice

1. Notice of this grievance process, including any informal resolution process;
2. Notice of the allegations, including sufficient details to the extent they are known at the time.
 - a. "Sufficient details" includes, but is not limited to: the identities of the parties involved in the incident; the conduct allegedly constituting sexual harassment, and the date and location of the alleged incident;
 - b. To the extent that any of these details are not known at the time the formal complaint is filed, the Title IX Coordinator must provide a supplemental notice when new or additional information is discovered.
3. A statement that the Respondent is presumed not responsible and that a determination regarding responsibility will be made at the conclusion of the grievance process;
4. Notice that the parties may have an advisor of their choice; and

NOTE: A party is entitled to the advisor of their choice. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(5)(iv). The advisor may be, but need not be, an attorney. Id. The advisor must be permitted to attend any meeting or grievance proceeding that the party attends. Id. However, the school or school district may limit the extent to which the advisor may participate in such meetings, so long as the restrictions are imposed equally on both the Complainants' advisors and Respondents' advisors. Id.

5. Notice informing the parties of any provision of the school or school district's code of conduct that prohibits knowingly making false statements or knowingly submitting false information during the grievance process.

C. Time Requirements for Providing Notice

The initial written notice must be provided to both parties with sufficient time for either party to prepare before any initial interview.

D. Interim Support Measures

1. Notice to the Complainant

The Title IX Coordinator is responsible for contacting the Complainant promptly, to:

- a. Discuss supportive measures that are available with or without the filing of a formal complaint;
- b. Consider the Complainant's wishes with respect to supportive measures; and
- c. Explain the process for filing a formal complaint to the Complainant.

2. What Constitutes an Interim Support Measure

Supportive measures are non-disciplinary measures including: counseling, extensions of deadlines or other course-related adjustments, modifications of work or class schedules, campus escort services, mutual restrictions on contact between the parties, changes in work or housing locations, leaves of absence, increased security, and monitoring of certain areas of the campus, and other similar measures.

3. Equality of Access to Support Measures

- a. Interim Support Measures must be provided on an equal basis to all parties.
- b. Any measure that is made available to a Complainant shall not be denied to a Respondent, and vice versa.

4. Confidentiality

Any supportive measures provided to either party shall be maintained as confidential, to the extent that confidentiality will not impair the school or school district's ability to provide such measures.

IV. EMERGENCY REMOVAL OF STUDENT RESPONDENTS

A. Presumption of Non-Removal

Generally, consistent with the school or school district's presumption of non-responsibility until the investigation has been completed and a determination of responsibility has been made, a student Respondent will not be suspended, expelled, excluded, or otherwise removed while an investigation is pending under the grievance process.

B. Standards for Immediate Removal

1. A mandatory individualized safety and risk analysis must be conducted.
2. The Respondent must pose an immediate threat arising from the allegations of sexual harassment.
3. The threat must relate to the physical health or safety of any student or other individual, including the Respondent themselves.

C. Procedural Requirements of Emergency Removal for Students

1. A Respondent who is removed on an emergency basis must be notified of the school or school district's decision.
2. A Respondent must be provided with an opportunity to challenge the decision immediately following removal.
3. The Respondent bears the burden of proving that the removal decision was incorrect.

D. Non-Applicability to Conduct Outside Title IX

Schools and school districts may still suspend, exclude, expel, or otherwise remove a student from school for any reason other than a pending sexual harassment investigation. The fact that a student has been named as a Respondent in a pending Title IX grievance process does not insulate them from consequences for other policy violations.

Students may not, however, be suspended for other reasons to circumvent the Title IX process. To the extent that the alleged harassment may also implicate other policies, in some cases the safest approach is to allow the Title IX process to play out and then address other policies as well.

V. INTERIM EMERGENCY REMOVAL OF EMPLOYEE

A. Permissible Removal of Non-Student Employee

A school or school district may place a non-student employee who is accused of sexual harassment on administrative leave pending the completion of the investigation without any specific limitation that would otherwise be applicable to students.

B. Factors to Consider

When making such a decision to place an employee on administrative leave pending investigation, among other factors, the school or school district may wish to consider the following:

1. The applicability of any restrictions or procedures on placement of an employee on administrative leave in a contract or collective bargaining agreement;
2. Whether the employee has the ability to destroy relevant information;
3. Whether a secret investigation may adduce more relevant evidence; and
4. Whether placing the employee on administrative leave is necessary to limit the employer's potential exposure to losses and/or negative publicity.

C. Directives During Administrative Leave

Depending on the specific situation, employers may wish to issue specific directives to employees placed on paid leave. Such directives typically include:

1. Prohibiting the employee from performing any work for the school or school district;
2. Prohibiting the employee from having retaliatory contact with Complainants or witnesses about the investigation;
3. Requiring the employee to turn in all employer property, including electronic files and school-issued laptops, as soon as they are placed on leave;
4. Directing the employee to appear for an interview; and
5. Ordering the employee to not access any of the employer's electronic resources during the investigation.

VI. INFORMAL RESOLUTION

A. Timing

1. A school or school district may offer informal resolution at any time after a formal complaint has been filed and before a determination regarding responsibility has been made.
2. No party may be forced to participate in such a process.
3. Both parties must voluntarily consent in writing to the informal resolution process.
4. The grievance process may be suspended while the parties work through the informal resolution process.

B. Required Notice

Before obtaining the parties' voluntary written consent, the school or school district must provide a notice that contains the following information.

1. The allegations;
2. The requirements of the informal resolution process, including the circumstances under which it would preclude the parties from resuming a formal complaint arising from the same allegations;

3. A provision specifying that any party has the right to withdraw from the process at any time prior to agreeing to an informal resolution, at which point the formal grievance process will resume; and
4. Any consequences from participating in the informal resolution process, including the records that will be maintained or could be shared.

C. Non-Availability of the Informal Resolution Process

Informal resolution is not available where the allegation is that an employee sexually harassed a student.

VII. ADVANCED MANEUVERS

A. Requests from Law Enforcement or Social Services Not to Investigate

1. Under the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution, federal law takes precedence over state law, and to the extent that they may conflict, federal law controls. Title IX is a federal law, enforced by the U.S. Department of Education. That authority cannot be overridden by a state or local agency.
2. Concurrent law enforcement investigations can be a justification to delay the grievance process for a reasonable amount of time. The grievance process cannot, however, be postponed indefinitely. Further, the grievance process can only be delayed via written notice, and that notice can only be provided after a Notice of Allegations has been issued. In other words, all parties need to be aware that the school or school district has received a formal complaint before a notice of delay or extension can be sent. Moreover, the notice that the investigation is being delayed or the timeframes are being extended must provide the reason for the delay or extension.
3. Bear in mind as well that law enforcement uses a different standard of proof than schools. Law enforcement is looking for evidence of a crime that would allow a prosecutor to build a case beyond a reasonable doubt, whereas schools are only looking for a preponderance of the evidence or clear and convincing evidence, both of which are lower standards.

B. Public Comment at School Board Meetings

1. North Dakota's Open Meeting Law requires the Board to close a meeting where private or confidential data is discussed. See N.D.C.C. § 44-04-17.1(3). This would apply to any private personnel or student data.
2. Additionally, the Title IX regulations require schools to maintain the confidentiality of any Complainant, Respondent, or witness, except as permitted by FERPA, required by law, or as necessary to carry out the grievance process. 34 C.F.R. § 106.71. As North Dakota's Open Meeting Law and Open Records Law do not require the disclosure of this information to the public, the Title IX regulations control and these identities must not be discussed at a public school board meeting.
3. While these comments are out-of-order for purposes of the School Board meeting, however, they may also create "actual knowledge" for the school or school district. Accordingly, the board chair should contact the Title IX Coordinator after the meeting with the name of the commenter so that the Title IX Coordinator can follow up.

C. Media Attention

1. In some situations, Title IX Complaints may attract or be brought to the attention of various news organizations. The regulations, however, require schools to keep the identities of parties and witnesses confidential, except as permitted by FERPA, as required by law, or as necessary to carry out the Grievance Process. 34 C.F.R. § 106.71. Failure to do so could be construed as retaliation. Id.
2. FERPA and state open-records laws further limit the disclosure of non-directory data on individual students, and of much of the data related to employees that would be gathered during the process of a Title IX investigation. Given these substantial restrictions, the best practice is either to say nothing, or to give a generic statement that the school or school district complies with all applicable laws and is following its policies and does not comment on any pending investigation.

D. Restraining Orders

1. Some allegations of sexual harassment, particularly harassment that is alleged to constitute sexual assault, stalking, or dating violence, may also involve parties where a restraining order is in place. Restraining orders impose obligations on the individuals, and may, but do not always, address how those restrictions apply at school.

School not required to enforce but must keep it in mind

2. A restraining order does not change the presumption of non-responsibility, nor does it allow the school to remove the Respondent absent an imminent risk of bodily harm. It may, however, inform the Title IX Coordinator's development of supportive measures.

E. Complaints Against Your Title IX Personnel

1. Title IX coordinators, investigators, and decision-makers all must be trained on the entire grievance process. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(1)(iii). Accordingly, anyone designated as part of a school or school district's Title IX personnel ought to have sufficient training that they could temporarily serve in a different role.
2. Schools and school districts also have the option to designate multiple trained individuals for each role.

F. Complaints of Conduct that has Already Been Investigated Under a Different Policy.

1. Although more extensive training is required for individuals designated as Title IX Coordinators, investigators, and decision-makers, staff who are not involved in the steps of the grievance process need to be trained to report actual or suspected sexual harassment to the Title IX Coordinator. Staff should be aware that the Title IX Coordinator, not individual staff members or other building administrators, is the individual with the authority to determine that conduct would not be sexual harassment even if proven.
2. In particular, all staff with disciplinary authority should be advised that disciplining an incident of potential sexual harassment as violation as some other policy, such as bullying or disorderly conduct, can subject the school district to serious liability. In Doe on behalf of Doe #2 v. Metro. Gov't of Nashville & Davidson Cnty., Tenn., 35 F.4th 459 (6th Cir. 2022), the Sixth Circuit reviewed a Title IX claim where two former students claimed, in part, that a school district was deliberately indifferent to systemic Title IX violations which, had they been addressed, could have saved the plaintiffs from being sexually assaulted at school. Discovery showed that, in the four-year period preceding the first plaintiff's assault, the school district had documented over 950 instances of sexual harassment, over 1200 instances of inappropriate sexual behavior, 45 instances of sexual assault, and 218 instances of inappropriate sexual contact," many of which were never reported to the Title IX Coordinator. In fact, discovery uncovered a widespread pattern of assistant principals only reporting the incidents that they had already screened and decided were sexual harassment to the Title IX Coordinator. Based on these facts, the Court allowed the plaintiffs' claim to proceed to trial.

STEP TWO- ROLE OF THE TITLE IX INVESTIGATOR

I. GENERAL RULES FOR CONDUCTING INVESTIGATIONS

- A. Independent Investigator. The investigator must be a neutral party, with no conflicts of interest regarding or bias for or against either the Complainant or Respondent, or Complainants or Respondents in general.
- B. Burden of Proof. The school or district retains, at all times, the burden of proof and the burden of gathering sufficient evidence to reach a determination regarding responsibility. This burden does not rest on either party. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(5)(i).
- C. Privileged Information. A school or district cannot require, allow, rely upon, or use evidence that either constitutes or seeks disclosure of any information protected by a legally recognized privilege, unless the person holding such privilege has waived the privilege. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(1)(x). Examples of privileged information that may arise in this context would include communications between pupils and qualified school counselors, see N.D.C.C. § 31-01-06.1, as well as the lawyer-client and physician-patient privilege.
- D. External Records. A party's medical or psychological records may only be obtained, accessed, considered, disclosed, or otherwise used with the voluntary written consent of the student, or of a parent if the student is a minor. As part of this consent, students and parents should be advised that any medical or psychological records that are disclosed to the investigator will be shared with the other party or parties in the course of the investigation, as all parties have the right to review and respond to all evidence prior to the completion of the investigation report.
- E. Data Privacy. The duty to comply with the Title IX regulations is not obviated or alleviated by the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act ("FERPA"). 34 C.F.R. § 106.6(e). The commentary relating to the regulations makes clear that the same applies to state laws, such as North Dakota's Open Records Laws, see N.D.C.C. §§ 44-04-18 et seq.
- F. Consolidation of Complaints. Multiple formal complaints may be consolidated into a single investigation if the allegations of sexual harassment arise out of the same facts or circumstances. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(4).
- G. Presentation of Evidence. The parties must be given equal opportunities to present witnesses, including both fact and expert witnesses, as well as other inculpatory and exculpatory evidence. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(5)(ii). The school or district cannot restrict the ability of either party to discuss the allegations under investigation or to gather and present relevant evidence. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(5)(iii).

- H. Notice of Interviews & Other Proceedings. If a Complainant or Respondent is expected to attend a hearing, investigative interview, or other meeting, that party must be given written notice of that hearing, interview, or meeting, with sufficient time to prepare. The notice must contain the date, time, location, and purpose of the meeting, hearing, or interview, as well as a list of the other individuals who will attend or participate.

Non-party witnesses are not entitled to advance notice of an interview under the regulations.

- I. Review of Evidence. All parties and their advisors must be given the opportunity to inspect and review any evidence obtained by the investigation that is directly related to the allegations, regardless of whether or not the school or district intends to rely on that evidence to reach a determination. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(5)(vi). This requirement extends to all evidence, inculpatory or exculpatory, whether obtained from a Complainant, Respondent, witness, or other third party, so long as the evidence is directly related to the allegations in the complaint. Id.

The parties must have at least ten (10) days to submit a written response to the evidence before the investigator can complete the investigation report. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(5)(vi). The investigator must consider any written responses from the parties before completing the report. Id.

- J. Investigation Reports. The investigative report must fairly summarize relevant evidence. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(5)(vii). A copy of the investigative report must be provided simultaneously to all parties and advisors. Id. Each party must have an additional 10 days to respond to the investigation report in writing. Id.

II. CONSIDERATIONS APPLICABLE TO ALL INVESTIGATIONS THAT ARE PARTICULARLY RELEVANT IN THE CONTEXT OF TITLE IX

- A. Determining Who Will be Present at Each Interview. As mentioned, parties are entitled to advance notice of who will be present at each interview or proceeding, as well as the purpose of that interview. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(5)(v). A party has the right to have their advisor present during the interview. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(5)(iv).

However, depending on the circumstances, it may be beneficial to have more than one school or district representative present. The investigator will need to make a determination as to who else may be present.

Upon request, an employee who is in a union has a right to have a union representative present if it appears that the interview may result in discipline. Some union contracts provide this right even if there is not a request by the employee. Investigators should bear this in mind when preparing for the interview of an employee-Respondent.

B. Voluntary Interviews. Schools cannot coerce anyone to participate, or retaliate against anyone for failing to participate, in a Title IX investigation. See 34 C.F.R. § 106.71. Compelling an interview could constitute retaliation under the Title IX regulations. Id.

1. The investigator should decide in advance how to respond if a party refuses to voluntarily answer questions. Typically, an individual will voluntarily cooperate if he/she knows that the interview may be his/her only chance to tell his/her side of the story.
2. The parties are entitled to the opportunity to be interviewed. They are not entitled to an interview, and the process is not invalidated by a party's refusal to be interviewed. In other words, a complaint cannot be dismissed because the Complainant does not want to be interviewed (absent a written request for dismissal from the Complainant to the Title IX Coordinator), and the Respondent cannot avoid a determination regarding responsibility by simply refusing to be interviewed.
3. Likewise, the Complainant and the Respondent are entitled to an equal opportunity to gather and present evidence. This does not mean, however, that the Complainant and Respondent are entitled to demand that the Investigator interview any particular witness, particularly if the proposed witness does not have any relevant personal knowledge.

C. Data Privacy Considerations. Although the Department of Education has concluded that Title IX obligations are not obviated by FERPA or state data privacy laws, the district's (or school's) inability to use, store, or disseminate the collected data may still be impacted by those laws. A broadly written notice about how the school or school district intends to use the data and who it will be shared with, should be provided before all interviews, especially interviews of the parties. Additionally, notice of the fact that the interviewee can choose not to provide the data will assist in averting claims of coercion.

In addition, it is best practice to be up-front with parties and witnesses about the dissemination of evidence, including interview summaries, to the Complainant, the Respondent, their advisors, and the decision-maker.

- D. Ask the Tough Questions. Even if the subject matter is uncomfortable—in a sexual harassment investigation, the subject matter is often uncomfortable. That does not absolve the investigator or the school or district of its obligation to provide due process. Furthermore, under the current Title IX regulations, the school or school district, not the Complainant or Respondent, has the burden to gather sufficient evidence for the decision-maker’s determination regarding responsibility.

- E. Ask About Impact and Intent.
 - 1. When interviewing the Complainant, part of what the Investigator should be exploring is the impact that the alleged behavior has had on the Complainant. For many Title IX complaints, even if the evidence shows the Respondent engaged in behavior toward the Complainant that was unwelcome, based on sex, severe, pervasive, and objectively offensive, the decision-maker must still determine whether the Complainant has been “effectively deprived of equal access” to the school or district’s education program or activity. Evidence that the Complainant has not been deprived of such access is directly relevant to the issue of whether the behavior, even if proven, meets the definition of sexual harassment, and the Investigator should be seeking these evidence. Examples of facts that may be relevant include, but are not limited to:
 - a. The Complainant seeking psychological counseling;
 - b. The Complainant expressing a fear of attending school or a particular class;
 - c. The Complainant avoiding attending school or a particular class;
 - d. Decrease in academic performance; and/or
 - e. The Complainant transferring to another school or school district altogether.
 - 2. If the Respondent admits to any particular action, ask what his/her intent was. The Respondent’s intent is often relevant to the issue of whether he or she engaged in behavior toward the Complainant “on the basis of sex.”

- F. Check Everyone’s Credibility. Whether the interviewee is a Complainant, a Respondent, or a witness, the decision-maker is likely limited to the Investigator’s interview summary. Accordingly, it is crucial that the Investigator provide the decision-maker with information necessary to assess an interviewee's credibility.

1. Credibility Clues. When interviewing the Complainant, the Respondent, or any other witness, the investigator should look for credibility clues.
 - a. Eye contact;
 - b. Unnatural or inconsistent hesitations;
 - c. Change in skin coloration (i.e. face turning red or white);
 - d. Change in pitch of voice;
 - e. Change in affect over the course of the interview;
 - f. Subtle or direct attempts to influence the outcome of the investigation through inducement or threat;
 - g. Statements reflecting a skewed view of reality.
 2. Consistency. When assessing credibility, consider the consistency of the witness/party statements.
 - a. Are there other witnesses or documents that support or refute the interviewee's testimony?
 - b. Is the conduct of the parties consistent with their description of the overall environment?
 - c. Does the chronology make sense from a practical standpoint?
 - d. Is the described behavior consistent with what came before and afterward?
 - e. Are there unexplainable lapses in recollection or periods of time that are not accounted for?
- G. Provide the Same Information to the Complainant and the Respondent. Ensure that any opening statements before each interview, including any explanation of the process, contain the same information

Practice Pointer: This does not necessarily mean that every party is given the same verbatim language. Particularly in investigations where students, especially younger students, make allegations against older students or staff, the words that an investigator uses may vary somewhat to ensure the younger child's understanding. However, all basic factual information, such as the investigator's role, the ground rules for the interview, and the importance of providing honest and accurate information, should be imparted to both parties.

Caution: On the other hand, the fact that the Title IX Investigator uses slightly different language when speaking to a young student as opposed to an adult does not relieve the Title IX Investigator of the responsibility to use a neutral tone. Using a friendly, cajoling tone with one party while using an aggressive, accusatory tone with the other could be construed as evidence of bias.

- H. Refer Questions about the Process, Supportive Measures, or Allegations Outside the Scope of the Complaint to the Title IX Coordinator. The Title IX Investigator's role is limited to gathering evidence related to the allegations in the formal complaint. Occasionally, during Title IX interviews, a party or witness may raise additional allegations of sexual harassment, sex discrimination, or other misconduct that were not mentioned in the formal complaint. To preserve the neutrality of the investigation, the Investigator should provide these allegations to the Title IX Coordinator and leave the Title IX Coordinator to determine whether the scope of the investigation needs to be expanded or amended. Similarly, any questions regarding supportive or safety measures implemented during the investigation should be answered by the Title IX Coordinator, not the Investigator.
- a. Relatedly, in order to safeguard against the Complainant later coming up with additional complaints/accusations that the school or district has never been informed of and then saying that the school or district did not respond appropriately to those complaints/accusations, it is important to ask the Complainant whether what they have stated is everything that forms the basis of his/her complaint.
 - b. Likewise, to avoid allegations of bias, the Respondent should be asked whether there is any other information related to the complaint, the Complainant, or the topics discussed in the interview that has not been addressed. This protects against claims that the Investigator failed to seek out all potentially relevant information if the Respondent is later determined to be responsible for the alleged behavior.

- I. School Officials Should Not Retain Copies of Actual or Suspected Child Pornography. In March, 2008, a high school assistant principal in Loudoun County, Virginia, was charged with possession of child pornography and failure to report child abuse because he mishandled a sexting investigation. State v. Ting-Yi Oei, Loudon County, Virginia (2008).

Title IX investigations are more likely than some other types of investigations to lead to images or videos, including but not limited to school surveillance footage, that contain pornographic images of children. E-mailing a pornographic image of a child, even if it is an e-mail from the Title IX Coordinator to the Title IX investigator, is a federal crime. Unlike FERPA and state data privacy laws, the Title IX regulations do not create an exception to these criminal statutes for the purpose of complying with the Title IX grievance process. Under absolutely no circumstances should an image or video containing a pornographic image of a child be disseminated to the parties and their advisors.

In some circumstances, a written description of the image or video may be necessary to the investigation. These should only be prepared with the advice of counsel, and only if the video or image itself is also being provided to law enforcement.

III. WRITING AN INVESTIGATION REPORT

- A. Timing of Completion of Investigation Report. The Title IX regulations provide that, “prior to completion of the investigative report,” the school or district “must send to each party and the party’s advisor, if any, the evidence subject to inspection and review in an electronic format or a hard copy.” The parties have at least ten days to submit a written response to the investigator before the investigation report can be completed.
- B. Provision of Investigation Report to Parties. The investigation report must be provided to the parties at least ten days before the decision-maker makes a decision (or at least ten days before any hearing, if the school or district has a hearing procedure).
- C. Required Contents of the Investigation Report. The Title IX regulations provide that the investigation report must “fairly summarize” the relevant evidence.
- D. Tips for Writing an Investigation Report.
1. Summarize each interview separately.

2. Include a list of each exhibit considered.
3. Identify the allegations under investigation.
4. Make specific findings and identify the relevant evidence that supports each finding.
5. If any evidence is excluded as irrelevant, explain why that evidence was excluded.
6. Explain any credibility determinations and the basis for each such determination (e.g., the witness's statement is not credible because he or she contradicted himself or herself multiple times or is directly contrary to video evidence).
7. Write objectively, avoiding unnecessary adjectives. For example, it may be necessary to describe a party as wearing a "yellow" shirt. Unless quoting a party or witness as part of a witness summary, however, it is unnecessary (and potentially evidence of bias) to refer to an action as "brutal" or "traumatic."
8. Write professionally. Remember that the investigation report will be sent to the parties before a determination is made, the decision-maker (who may be the investigator's superior at the school or district), and, potentially, will be an exhibit in further administrative proceedings or a lawsuit.
 - a. Check spelling and grammar before finalizing the investigation report.
 - b. Avoid colloquialisms, jargon, slang, profanity, and contractions, unless directly quoting a party or witness, in which case, the word or phrase should be inside of quotation marks.
9. The investigation report should be concise, but thorough.

E. Addressing Parties' Responses to the Evidence. Before the Investigator can finalize the investigation report, any written response to the evidence by the parties has to be considered. The written responses are not themselves evidence, and do not need to be circulated amongst the parties.

As a best practice, "consider" means something more than "read." Investigators should be prepared to professionally address a party's written response in writing as part of the report. This may vary from explaining certain investigative steps that were or were not taken, explaining why certain witnesses were or were not interviewed, or at a minimum acknowledging any disagreements that a party may have raised with the evidence.

Practice Pointer: A party's written response to the evidence should be provided to the decision-maker, who will have to also consider the parties' written responses to the investigation report. Leaving a decision-maker to consider a written response that was not expressly addressed by the investigator, particularly if the investigator and decision-maker are not members of the same organization, can lead to confusion and inconsistent messaging.

F. What Does it Mean for Evidence to Be Relevant? Both investigators and decision-makers are tasked with limiting their reports and/or the questions asked by the parties during cross-examination to information and questions that are "relevant."

1. Evidence is relevant if "it has any tendency to make a fact more or less probable than it would be without the evidence" and when "the fact is of consequence in determining the action." Fed. R. Evid. 401.
2. The only type of evidence that is never relevant in a Title IX investigation is evidence relating to the Complainant's sexual predisposition or prior sexual behavior. See 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(1)(iii) & 106.45(b)(6).
3. Other than this restriction, an investigator must use judgment when drafting the investigation report to determine whether the evidence is related to a fact that would potentially impact the outcome of the complaint, and whether the evidence makes that fact more or less likely to be true.
 - a. Investigators must be cautious, however, to avoid intruding on a decision-maker's role and resolving issues of responsibility in the investigation report. Such overreach may expose the investigator to an allegation of bias, or could constitute a procedural irregularity justifying appeal.

IV. AVOIDING BIAS AND CONFLICT OF INTEREST

A. Conflicts of Interest. The investigator's role is to investigate the complaint objectively. Accordingly, the investigator cannot have any personal interest in the outcome of the investigation. The following are examples of personal interests that may present a conflict of interest that disqualifies the investigator from serving impartially:

1. Financial interest in the outcome of the investigation.
2. Personal interest stemming from the investigator's personal relationship with a party to the investigation, or that of the investigator's family.
3. Professional interest or incompatible roles within the school or district.

B. Bias. The investigator must not allow any personal bias to influence the outcome of the investigation. A biased investigation, such as one based on the predetermination that "all boys are violent" or "all girls are liars" will likely result in an appeal and/or liability under Title IX. Similarly, the investigator cannot allow his or her past experience with a particular party or witness to influence the outcome of the investigation. Instead, all investigations must be based on credible, relevant evidence considered as part of that investigation.

C. Addressing Implicit Biases.

1. Avoid characterizations or statements based on an individual's race, sex, gender, sexual orientation, disability status, religion, or other protected class status.
2. Give equal consideration to Complainants, Respondents, and witnesses, regardless of their race, sex, gender, sexual orientation, disability status, religion, or other protected class status.
3. Impose the same ground rules, adopt the same tone of voice, and otherwise treat all interviewees the same, regardless of race, sex, gender, sexual orientation, disability status, religion, or other protected class status.
4. Avoid "spokesperson questions" such as asking for the "female's" view on things or the "boys' perspective."
5. Investigators should examine their own behavior and be aware of their own unconscious biases. An investigator should refrain from making assumptions about different student or employee groups based on race, sex, gender, sexual orientation, disability status, religion, or other protected class status.

- D. Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity. As mentioned, “on the basis of sex,” for purposes of Title IX, is currently interpreted by OCR to include sexual orientation and gender identity. An investigator should be careful, therefore, to avoid dismissing an allegation as not rising to the level of sex harassment because it pertains to harassment because the Complainant is not heterosexual or cisgendered, or is perceived as not being heterosexual or cisgender.

V. ADVANCED MANEUVERS – HIGH STRESS INVESTIGATION SCENARIOS

- A. Advisor vs. Advocate. Typically, advisors are understanding, particularly after receiving advance notice, that the investigator needs to obtain information directly from the party. Occasionally, however, an advisor may become obstructive or attempt to control the interview. As part of avoiding bias, investigators (and decision-makers) need to be careful not to impute the statements or actions of advisors to the party. Investigators should avoid threatening to end the interview wherever possible, to avoid allegations of unequal treatment. However, a Complainant or Respondent is only entitled to the opportunity to present evidence, and the regulations do not require a party to actually be interviewed.
- B. Advisor vs. Witness. Most commonly, advisors are parents, attorneys, or union representatives. Sometimes, however, a Complainant or Respondent may designate a coworker or classmate who is also likely to be a witness in the investigation. The regulations do not allow for any limitations on who a party may select as their advisor. However, having an advisor also be a witness can create significant issues related to credibility and personal knowledge that need to be accounted for when asking questions.

STEP THREE – ROLE OF THE DECISION-MAKER

I. REVIEW OF INVESTIGATION REPORT

A. Standard of Review

1. The decision-maker is responsible for reviewing the Investigator's report and determining whether the Respondent is responsible for the conduct alleged.
2. In determining whether the conduct occurred, the decision-maker must use one of the following the standards of evidence selected by the school or school district:
 - a. "Preponderance of the evidence" is understood to mean a conclusion that a fact is more likely than not to be true."
 - b. "Clear and convincing evidence" means that a fact is highly probable to be true.
3. It is suggested in the preamble to the regulations that when the evidence is truly 50/50, the determination should be non-responsibility on the part of the Respondent.
4. The same standard of proof shall apply regardless of whether the Respondent is a student or a staff member.

B. Opportunity for Parties to Respond to Report

1. The decision-maker is responsible for receiving the response of the parties or their advisors to the investigation report.
2. The response must be delivered to the decision-maker within ten (10) calendar days from the day that the investigation report is provided to the parties.

C. Notification of Rights to a Hearing/Written Questions

When the investigation report is provided to the parties and the decision-maker, either the Title IX Coordinator or the decision-maker should notify the parties of their rights to submit written questions, and/or the scheduling of a hearing and their rights during the hearing, if applicable.

II. WRITTEN QUESTIONS

A. Submission of Written Questions

1. All schools must allow for an exchange of written questions, between the parties, regardless of whether a live hearing is also offered.
2. After the investigation report has been sent to the parties, and before the decision-maker makes a determination regarding responsibility, the parties must be permitted to submit written, relevant questions to be asked of any other party or witness.

B. Relevancy

1. Upon receipt of the written questions, the decision-maker makes determinations as to what is relevant and may exclude irrelevant questions as long as the party asking the question receives an explanation as to why the question is not relevant.
2. The Title IX regulations do not contain a definition or standard by which relevancy determinations are to be made other than noting that the ordinary meaning of the word should be understood and applied.
3. Evidence is relevant if “it has any tendency to make a fact more or less probable than it would be without the evidence” and when “the fact is of consequence in determining the action.” Fed. R. Evid. 401.
4. The only type of evidence that is never relevant in a Title IX investigation is evidence relating to the Complainant’s sexual predisposition or prior sexual behavior, unless:
 - a. such questions and evidence about prior sexual behavior are offered to prove that someone other than the Respondent committed the alleged conduct; or
 - b. if the questions and evidence concern a specific incident so the Complainant’s prior sexual behavior with respect to the Respondent are offered to prove consent.

C. Privileged Information

The decision-maker, similar to the investigator, also cannot require, allow, rely upon, or use evidence that either constitutes or seeks disclosure of any information protected by a legally recognized privilege, unless the person holding such privilege has waived the privilege.

D. Time Limitations

The Regulations do not contain a specific time limitation for the written question process but require that the process must include sufficient time for follow-up questions.

III. LIVE HEARINGS

A. Live Hearings are Optional

1. K-12 schools have the option to allow for a live hearing as part of the grievance process, but are not required to do so.
2. There is no specific time frame as to when a hearing must be held. The decision-maker must provide the parties with notice of the hearing and sufficient time for the parties to prepare to participate.

B. Procedures for Live Hearings

1. Recording

Any live hearing must be recorded or transcribed and made available to the parties for inspection and review.

2. Appointment of Advisor

- a. A Complainant and a Respondent are entitled to have an advisor during the investigation portion of the complaint/grievance process as well as during any live hearing.
- b. If the party does not have a representative, the school or school district is required to appoint one for that party at the cost of the school or school district.

3. Questioning

- a. At the hearing, each party's advisor is allowed to ask relevant questions of the other party or parties, and of the witnesses and to examine and follow-up with questions including those challenging credibility.
- b. Cross-examination may only be conducted directly, orally, and in real time by the parties' adviser and never by the party personally.
- c. The decision-maker must decide whether each question is relevant before the party or witness answers the question.
- d. A party may request that the live hearing occur with the parties located in separate rooms with technology enabling the decision-maker and parties to simultaneously see and hear the party or witness answering questions.
- e. If a party or witness refuses to submit to cross-examination at the hearing, the decision-maker cannot rely on any statement of that party when making a determination regarding responsibility; however, the decision-maker also cannot draw an inference regarding responsibility based solely on a party's or witness's absence.

III. WRITTEN DETERMINATIONS REGARDING RESPONSIBILITY

A. Obligation of decision-maker to Issue a Written Determination

After reviewing the investigation report, the parties' submissions in response to the investigation report, the written cross-examination questions and answers, and any live hearing testimony (if any), the decision-maker must issue a written determination simultaneously to all parties.

B. Contents of the Determination

The report must contain the following information:

1. Identification of the allegations potentially constituting sexual harassment;
2. A description of the procedural steps taken under this process, including any notifications, interviews, hearings, and other methods used to gather evidence, if applicable;

3. Findings of fact supporting the determination;
4. Conclusions applying the school or school district's code of conduct or policies to the facts found by the decision-maker;
5. A statement of the result as to each allegation, including:
 - a. a determination regarding responsibility;
 - b. the rationale for the result;
 - c. any disciplinary sanctions imposed on the Respondent, and
 - d. any remedies designed to restore or preserve the Complainant's equal access to the school or school district's education program or activity.
6. The procedure for appealing the determination of responsibility.

C. Referral of the Determination

A copy of the report should be forwarded to the Title IX Coordinator who is responsible for implementing any remedies.

D. Finality of the Determination

The determination of the decision-maker only becomes final when the appeal period expires or any appeal is adjudicated.

IV. ADVANCED MANEUVERS – HIGH STRESS SCENARIOS FOR DECISION-MAKERS

- A. Cross-Examination Questions. As mentioned, the decision-maker must provide any party or witness with a party's cross-examination questions and a reasonable amount of time to respond. The party can work with an advisor to formulate the questions. As also mentioned, although a party's advisor is not required to be an attorney, it is not uncommon for attorneys to serve as advisors. Some attorney-advisors are familiar with Title IX, while others may be less familiar. In particular, attorneys who practice criminal defense are, like law enforcement agencies, accustomed to focusing on different facts and different burdens of proof than educators and school law attorneys. Likewise, parents, who may not be familiar with the Title IX process, can also have a different view of what is relevant.

B. Investigator Missteps. As also mentioned, the written determination regarding responsibility must describe the procedural steps of the investigation. Occasionally, decision-makers completing this description find a procedural issue that the investigator may have inadvertently overlooked, a notice that was missed, or something else required by the regulations. Depending on the severity of the misstep, an amended or supplemental investigation report may be needed. However, the decision-maker can also address the issue in the written determination regarding responsibility if the error would not have any impact on the outcome of the matter. This is a fact-specific determination that will vary from investigation to investigation; however, it is an important decision because procedural irregularities that affect the outcome are a basis for appeal.

PROCESS

I. REQUIRED APPEAL PROCESS

- A. The opportunity to appeal a dismissal or a determination of responsibility must be equally available to both parties. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(8)(i). The school or district may set the length of the appeal period. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(1)(v).
- B. There are three grounds for appeal that the school or District is required to recognize:
 - 1. A procedural irregularity affected the outcome of the matter;
 - 2. New evidence that was not reasonably available at the time of the determination or dismissal and that could affect the outcome of the matter; or
 - 3. The Title IX Coordinator, investigator, or decision-maker had a conflict of interest or bias for or against Complainants or Respondents generally or the individual Complainant or Respondent, and the conflict of interest or bias affected the outcome of the matter.

34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(8)(i). The school or district may designate additional bases as it deems appropriate, so long as the basis for appeal is equally available to Complainants and Respondents. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(8)(ii).

- C. For all appeals, the school or district’s process must include the following:
 - 1. Notify the other party in writing when an appeal is filed.
 - 2. Use a different, adequately trained, decision-maker than the decision-maker who made the additional determination. This decision-maker cannot be the Title IX Coordinator or the investigator.
 - 3. Give both parties a reasonable, equal opportunity to submit written statements in support of, or challenging, the determination or dismissal.
 - 4. Issue a written decision describing the result of the appeal and the rationale for the result simultaneously to both parties.

II. ADVANCED MANEUVER: BONUS POST-DECISION STRESSOR

The grievance process required by the regulations can be extremely emotionally challenging for parties. Once the written determination has been issued, a Respondent who was found not to have engaged in sexual harassment, or a Complainant whose allegations were not substantiated, may express these emotions by alleging that the other party made materially false statements or submitted materially false evidence in bad faith during the investigation. Schools and school districts can discipline students or employees, even though it does not satisfy the regulatory definitions of sexual harassment or retaliation, but need to be extremely careful when doing so.

- A. The Title IX Regulations expressly provide that “a determination regarding responsibility, alone, is not sufficient to conclude that any party made a materially false statement in bad faith.” 34 C.F.R. § 106.71(b)(2). In other words, the fact that the decision-maker’s determination does not align with statements made by a party in an interview does not, in and of itself, prove that that party lied in their interview.
- B. To violate the policy, (1) the statement or evidence must be false, (2) the statement or evidence must be material, meaning it must have impacted the outcome of the grievance process, and (3) the statement or evidence must have been made or submitted in bad faith, meaning the school or school district needs to be able to prove that the party knew the statement was false and made it anyway.

LEGAL UPDATE

Since the Title IX regulations went into effect in August 2020, most of the legal disputes have involved colleges and universities, which have different processes (such as required live hearings) and a different set of harassment fact patterns (such as dorm life). There are, however, a couple of cases that schools should keep in mind.

- A. Victim Rights Law Center et al. v. Cardona, 552 F.Supp.3d 104 (D. Mass. 2021), clarified by Victim Rights Law Center et al. v. Cardona, Civil Action No. 20-11104-WGY, 2021 WL 3516475 (D. Mass. Aug. 10, 2021). As enacted in August 2020, the regulation governing live hearings stated that, if a party or witness did not submit to cross-examination at a live hearing, the decision-maker could not rely on any statement of that party or witness when making a determination regarding responsibility. See 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(6)(i) (2020). In July 2021, the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts vacated that language, finding that it was arbitrary and capricious. In particular, the Court expressed concern that a Respondent could admit to the alleged conduct in an interview with the investigator, or to other third parties, and then void that admission by simply not attending the hearing.

The regulations do not similarly bar a decision-maker from considering statements made by a witness or party who does not answer written cross-examination questions. 34 C.F.R. § 106.45(b)(6)(ii). In light of Victim Rights Law Center, schools and school districts should refrain from imposing such a bar.

- B. Tennessee et al v. U.S. Department of Education, Case No. 3:21-cv-308, 2022 WL 2791450 (E.D. Tenn. Jul. 15, 2022). Tennessee and 19 other states, including South Dakota, moved for a preliminary injunction to prevent the U.S. Department of Education’s Office for Civil Rights (“OCR”) from enforcing its June 2021 Notice of Interpretation, in which OCR took the position that sex discrimination extends to sexual orientation and gender identity. The states argued that the Notice of Interpretation, which was not adopted via an official regulation, conflicted with state laws regarding participation in sports and designation of bathrooms based on assigned sex rather than gender identity. The Court found that the Notice of Interpretation was invalid because the notice-and-comment procedures that apply to regulatory rulemaking were not followed, and enjoined its enforcement in the 20 states that had sued.

This injunction does not apply in Minnesota or North Dakota.

- C. KD v. Douglas County Sch. Dist. No. 001, 1 F.4th 591 (8th Cir. 2021). This case involved a middle school student, L.D., who was sexually assaulted by her algebra teacher. In April 2014, a school staff member notified the principal that the algebra teacher was mentoring the student, despite the fact that opposite-sex mentor-mentee pairings were prohibited. The principal prohibited the teacher from mentoring the student without parental consent, which the teacher eventually obtained. Later that same month, the teacher chaperoned a weekend field trip, and sent the principal pictures of students, including L.D. The e-mail also included correspondence between the teacher and L.D. in which he referred to her as “sweetheart” and told her “I’ve never had a student mean this much to me;” however, the principal did not scroll down the e-mail chain, and only noticed the photographs. During the 2014-2015 school year, incidents continued, including reports that L.D. and the teacher were eating lunch alone in his classroom, that the teacher tied L.D.’s shoe and poked her stomach in the hallway, and that he was hugging students for excessive periods of time. The principal investigated each of these reports, as well as an anonymous note he received calling into question a school day on which both L.D. and the teacher were absent, but did not find any evidence of a sexual or romantic relationship. Nevertheless, the principal repeatedly counseled the teacher regarding expectations for his interactions with students. Another teacher also contacted Child Protective Services regarding the algebra teacher’s behavior toward L.D. and other students. Six months after L.D. graduated from middle school, the algebra teacher was arrested for sexually assaulting her.

The student’s parents sued the school district, the principal, and the teacher who assaulted their daughter under Title IX, as well as various other legal theories. The court granted summary judgment in favor of the principal and school district, however because, while the teacher’s behavior toward L.D. was strange, the school had no knowledge of any sexual interactions between the two until it learned of the teacher’s arrest.

The teacher, on the other hand, was found individually liable for $1.25 million in damages, which the school district was not required to cover because it was not responsible for his intentional actions.
